Step by step: transitioning to a smarter way of managing courses

✓ Step 1: Understand how you manage training today

- How do you manage your courses today? Another system? Excel? Outlook calendar?
- How do you present your courses? Do you regularly update your website with new dates?
- Do you send confirmations and invitations manually? By email, or even by postal mail?
- How do you handle payments? Do you create invoices manually and send them by post?
- Do you create participant lists and course certificates in word, indesign, or similar tools?
- Who handles attendance tracking, and how do you compile statistics from your courses?
- Profitability! How do you identify changes and tackle challenges in the best possible way?

✓ Step 2: Imagine your future work processes

- Who should be responsible, and what could be included in the role description?
- When you have more time available, how can you find more customers and grow?
- Which parts of the administration would you like to automate?
- Would you like the instructor to manage attendance directly on their mobilephone?
- Would you like to avoid creating manual invoices?

✓ Step 3: Target post-implementation achievements

- Eliminate as many manual tasks as possible in your work
- Implement checklists and automated routines to avoid "simple mistakes"
- Save time by managing all your training activities in one place
- Identify your best-selling and most profitable courses
