Know What You Don't Know About Domains

What is a Domain?

Simply put, a domain name is the name of your website. It comes in the form of a URL and is used to locate a specific person's or organization's website. Each domain name directs to the users unique IP address. Since nouns are easier to remember, we usually prefer domain names instead of complicated IP addresses.

A domain is divided in to 3 categories: Sub domain, domain name, and top level domain. Let's take about.sibername.com for example. 'about' is the subdomain, 'sibername' is the domain name, and '.com' is the URL which becomes the top level domain. You can also have multiple subdomains for website page segregation. Example: vision.about.sibername.com.

The length of a domain name should not exceed 255 characters. Selecting a domain name is similar to choosing your company name. It should be concise, catchy but at the same time should reflect your services and company ethos.

Domain Privacy

While buying a domain in Canada, it becomes mandatory that you pass on all necessary contact information to ICANN WHOis directory. As is the case with Sibername, usually the company you buy a new domain in Canada from processes this step. Depending upon your company, anyone can access your contact information from the directory. However, with Sibername, now you can opt for Private Domain Name Registration, where only the generic Sibername contact details will be open to public instead of your personal details.

SSL Certificates

Secure Socket Locket is a protocol that transmits information in an encrypted form across the internet. SSL certified URLs will be identified by the ‘https’ and a padlock icon. With Sibername, you can also opt for SSL certificate for your domain and get secured connection from user computer to browser.
