How many licenses do I need?

Operator Reach Console Licenses

Each operator actively using the Goverlan Reach Console must own a license. When first starting, the Goverlan Reach Console application will request a sign-on in order to acquire a license from your license pool. Goverlan Reach supports floating licenses.

Internal End Points

You do not need additional licenses for client end points that are within your private network. If an internal end point with Goverlan Reach Client Agents installed on it moves outside the private network, it becomes an external end point.

External End Points

You need ONE Reach Node license for EACH REGISTERED EXTERNAL end point. A registered external end point is either a machine equipped with the Goverlan Reach Client Agent which is connected outside of your private network, a corporate laptop user who is traveling or an On-Demand Support session.
